CHILD DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM READY FOR FALL QUARTER

A child development program, including a learning center, a terminal two-year program in child growth and development and courses leading to transfer to a four-year degree, will all be part of a new curriculum offered at Shelton State Junior College in the fall.

The child development center will be a model program, designed for working parents of Shelton State students and faculty. Accepting 20 children, ranging in ages from three to five years, the center will be open Monday - Friday from 7:30 a.m. until noon. A transfer pick-up program to other afternoon day-care centers will be available for parents needing child care throughout the afternoons.

A quality child care center will also be open from 5 - 8 p.m. for kindergarten through elementary grade children. While the morning program will be open to children of parents not connected with the college, the evening center will be designed entirely for children of Shelton State students.

Located at the old Southside Church of the Nazarene on Greensboro Ave., the center will be staffed at all times, according to Allan Mallory, administrator for the program, by Mallory, an assistant, and six to ten Shelton students. The students staffing the center will come from the courses in child development offered this fall. For more information on the center or courses, contact Dean Howington or Mallory.
